

Dorper Embryos

Searching for a heavier muscled breed of hair sheep that required no shearing? Dorpers have those attributes.

The Dorper's covering of hair and wool is shed annually so there is no need for shearing. Dorpers are fast growing, hardy, and adaptable, thriving under many different conditions. The ewes are excellent mothers and are year round breeders. An added bonus is their excellent disposition.

Currently we have over 200 embryos in the tank – health qualified and ready to ship internationally. The genetic variety in this group is most impressive – 14 different sires used including the Grand and Reserve Grand Champion Rams from the Calgary Stampede 2007.

The donors were selected for strong shedding character and more hair verse wool covering. Full, well rounded rumps were also a main criteria for selection.

You will not be disappointed in the resulting progeny.
